Wow, that was an amazing, totally unexpected, and super-sweet little add-on. Heh, I'm surprised at how much I liked it. I guess there's just something about the music which brings me back to those "times" when music really was the primary way of communication. But, alas, at least my favorite part's over. Back to work I go! (more to come) Hey everyone, So here's the story: While talking to my dad about my future I found out that he's having a bit of a hard time dealing with me moving to a different city (yeah, it's the whole city, not just a "different neighborhood"). He kept stressing over me leaving in just a few months, and then my cousin Tammi's getting married, and he didn't want to see me upset, so he asked me if I could at least call him every day or something. I couldn't, honestly, and that's something I really regret. I told him it wasn't a problem, and said I would make sure to call him as often as I could. Since that conversation I've been thinking about my dad, and the people I've lost, my childhood, a lot, and I realized that I want to make him proud of me, and to try to make his life a little better before he's gone. So, with that in mind, I've been thinking a lot, and doing some research, about how to make the rest of my life a little better for him. I really want to help people who are in the same situation as my dad, and who really need help, so I'm trying to figure out what I can do for them. I know I'm going to start a fundraiser, and I'll try to get as many donations as possible, because I think the money people raise will be more useful than any other kind of donation could be. I want to make this post as long as possible, but since I have to be up early tomorrow I can't spend a lot of time on it. I just wanted to mention all this to say that I have some idea about how I'm going to spend the rest of my time on this earth, and the fact that I'm going to make a change in how I spend my time on earth is important for me, so I just wanted to share it with you. I'll try to post more details about what
